'Hollywood Bishop' faces a long fight

By Gregg Jones
Gazette Staff

During his 21 years in Los Angeles, Henry Hartford Brookins came to be known as "the Hollywood bishop," prelate to the rich and powerful.

He rose from pastor of that city's prestigious First African Methodist Episcopal Church to bishop of the AME district encompassing the state of California. He lived in style, cultivating a coterie of influential friends. He drove a Mercedes-Benz.

Brookins, the son of a Mississippi sharecropper, still owns a house in the plush southern California enclave of Bel Air, according to recent news accounts. Prior to his arrival in Little Rock in 1984, he was named one of the 10 best-dressed men in America by Jet magazine.

Friends and associates have called Bishop H.H. Brookins a man of charisma and intelligence, a flamboyant preacher, a passionate orator, a figure of grace and elan who moves with ease in monied circles.

A veteran civil rights campaigner, he marched alongside the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. A kingmaker in the black community, he has effectively wielded power during his tenure in the church hierarchy.

Now, at 65, Brookins is at the center of what his accusers and other church members are calling a scandal in the three-million-member AME church.

A lawsuit filed Tuesday in Pulaski County Chancery Court accused Brookins of diverting for personal use about $380,000 from the AME's 12th district — one of the church's poorest districts, made up of Arkansas and Oklahoma — and from Shorter College, the financially troubled, AME-owned junior college in North Little Rock.

1986: Brookins and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, his best man, at Brookins' wedding in Little Rock.

The alleged improprieties occurred during Brookins' tenure as presiding bishop of the 12th district, based in Little Rock, from 1984 until 1988. Since July 1988, Brookins has served as prelate of the AME's 2nd district, headquartered in Washington, D.C.

In a telephone interview Thursday with the Arkansas Gazette, Brookins dismissed charges of financial impropriety as "wild, irresponsible allegations" and the malicious work of "one disgruntled former member of the board of trustees" of Shorter College.

"It's a personal vendetta thing," Brookins said, adding that he was prepared to fight the charges in court.

Brookins said the First Commercial Bank account he allegedly used to divert church and Shorter College funds for his use was a personal account. "No school funds were in it, not a dime," Brookins said.

Nonetheless, the allegations against Brookins appear to have shaken the faith of some of the 12th district church members.

"When he came here, I did hear that Brookins was a businessman, he has properties, that sort of thing," recalled a lifelong member of the AME church who is a senior official at Shorter College. "He focused a lot on economic development. Was he interested in his own economic development? That's a question that needs to be answered."

Said another longtime church member in Little Rock, who insisted on anonymity, "I just wish it were all over. But I'm not sure whether we'll ever know exactly what went on."

Born the son of a Yazoo, Miss., sharecropper on June 8, 1925, Brookins first gained prominence within the AME church for his involvement in civil rights causes in Wichita, Kan., in the wake of the Supreme Court's landmark school desegregation decision in 1954, according to an official church biography.

Became pastor

Brookins' star began a steady climb with an appointment in 1959 as pastor of the First AME Church of Los Angeles. He proved adept at fund-raising, supervising the construction of a new multimillion dollar sanctuary for the First AME Church. Elected a bishop in 1972, Brookins was assigned to Africa for several years. He later served a term as bishop for the church's 5th Episcopal district, which includes the state of California.

During his years in Los Angeles, first as a pastor and later as a bishop, Brookins established a reputation as a political kingmaker. One of his church members in Los Angeles was Tom Bradley, a former policeman who became the city's first black chief of police. Under Brookins' tutelage, Bradley was elected to the City Council and later became the city's first black mayor. Brookins was a campaign co-chairman, according to a church biography and press accounts.

Brookins' work in the civil rights movement and his activism on behalf of black businessmen enabled him to forge close relationships with a impressive array of prominent figures. He acted as a go-between in helping black-owned businesses negotiate contracts with the city of Los Angeles, helped pioneer church-directed economic development projects in black communities and played a key role in the AME church's foray into building federally subsidized, low-income housing in a number of other cities across the country.

The Los Angeles Times reported in February that Brookins obtained $336,000 in federal poverty loans to renovate an office complex he secretly owned. Los Angeles officials, who awarded the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development funds to Brookins between 1982 and 1985, thought the renovation funds were going to a church corporation, according to articles in the Times and the Washington Post. That corporation did not legally exist, the Times reported.

By the mid-1980s, Brookins was a part of the power structure of black America, aided by friendships with Jesse Jackson and other black leaders. An eligible bachelor with a taste for expensive clothes, he was frequently in the pages of Jet and Ebony magazines, an acquaintance of Brookins' recalled.

Accustomed to the glitz of southern California, Brookins was less than thrilled with his assignment to Little Rock and one of the poorest districts of the AME — an assignment, Brookins would later tell a reporter, that was the work of his enemies within the church.

After Brookins arrived in 1984, he was feted regularly at such affairs as the lavish "banquet of the century" at the Robinson Center in July 1985, attended by Jesse Jackson and Gov. and Mrs. Bill Clinton.

One of the most pressing problems Brookins inherited as bishop of the 12th district was the chronic financial woes of Shorter College, the North Little Rock community college owned and operated by the AME church. Annual enrollment hovers slightly above 100 students. The 12th district bishop is responsible for raising enough money to keep Shorter open.

Raising money was a talent Brookins had crafted as a pastor and bishop. He was not bashful about calling out names of those attending his services and asking them to come forward and place a check in his hand, one AME member who attended several of Brookins' appearances at church services and fund-raisers remembered.

Because of his stature as a black leader, coupled with the power bestowed on AME bishops, Brookins was free to conduct church business — and handle the accumulating funds — as he saw fit, according to the Rev. R.J. Hampton, the Rev. George E. West of Fort Smith and other church sources.

West, a Shorter board member, filed the suit against Brookins. He and Hampton, a presiding elder of the Hot Springs-Gurdon district of the church, later asked a federal judge to prohibit Brookins' successor, Bishop H.A. Belin Jr., from collecting and distributing money in the name of the church until safeguards were intact.

Opened account

On March 19, 1986, three days before he was to be married to a 36-year-old Los Angeles publicist, Brookins walked into the main office of the First Commercial Bank at Broadway and Capitol

Avenue and opened a combination money market and checking account with an initial $30,000 deposit.

Listing himself as the sole signatory for account No. 0-69179-8, Brookins designated the account as "H.H. Brookins — Shorter College Account," bank documents obtained by the Gazette show.

The chancery court lawsuit alleged Brookins deposited money in the account that had been collected "for the use and benefit of Shorter College." Brookins insisted last week that the $380,000 deposited over roughly a two-year period were his personal funds, and that he had loaned the college up to $50,000 of his own money.

Asked the source of the large sums of money he deposited in the account, Brookins paused before replying, "I'm not going to get into that." Moments later, he added, "I had some consulting fees, not in Arkansas."

Over a 28-month period, from March 19, 1986 until July 25, 1988, Brookins wrote checks on the account to himself, to his personal secretary, to American Express, and to a number of other individuals and organizations — many with no obvious connection to the AME church or Shorter College.

It wasn't until the late summer of 1988, nearly two months after Brookins had left Little Rock, that the board of trustees of Shorter College learned of the First Commercial account, said Dr. W.D. Goldsby, president of Shorter College at the time. On Aug. 19, 1988, Goldsby presented the school's trustees and Belin with a report on Shorter College fiscal affairs.

Belin refused to investigate and never asked Brookins to account for the money, Hampton and Goldsby said. Repeated attempts to contact Belin and his secretary, Anita Elliott, were unsuccessful.

"We just want some answers and some accountability," Hampton said. "If you're innocent, just come and lay some facts on the table."

"We're not trying to embarrass the church or anybody," he said.

A Brookins chronology

■ 1984: Brookins arrives in Little Rock from Los Angeles.

■ July 6, 1985: Jesse Jackson comes to Little Rock to speak at the "Banquet of the Century: A Salute to Bishop H. H. Brookins" at Robinson Center. Addressing a crowd of 650, including Gov. Bill Clinton and other state officials, Jackson credits Brookins with launching his 1984 presidential campaign.

■ March 19, 1986: Brookins opens a money market-checking account at First Commercial Bank with a $30,000 deposit.

■ March 22, 1986: With Jesse Jackson as best man, Brookins marries Los Angeles publicist Bonita Coleman in a lavish ceremony in Little Rock, followed by a champagne reception attended by 1,000 people.

■ June 4, 1987: Brookins announces a "total reorganization plan is in progress" at financially strapped Shorter College, the AME-operated church in North Little Rock.

■ July 1987: Brookins' wife of 16 months files for divorce in a Los Angeles court, citing irreconcilable differences.

■ July 1988: Brookins is appointed prelate of the AME church's 2nd Episcopal district, based in Washington, D.C. Bishop Henry Belin is appointed to succeed Brookins in Little Rock.

■ Aug. 19, 1988: The Shorter College board of trustees learns of the First Commercial Bank account listed as "H. H. Brookins-Shorter College Account."

■ January 1989: Financial problems force layoffs at Shorter College.

■ June 5, 1990: The Rev. George E. West of Fort Smith files a lawsuit in Pulaski County chancery court accusing Brookins of diverting about $380,000 from the AME church Shorter College for personal use.

The charges

A chancery court lawsuit includes these charges about Bishop H. H. Brookins' use of money from a bank account that the plaintiffs say belongs to the AME church:

- Some checks Brookins wrote to himself were subsequently deposited in Brookins' personal account at the Wilshire State Bank in Los Angeles.

- The total amount of the checks Brookins wrote to himself was $137,850.

- From July 9, 1987, to July 25, 1988, Brookins wrote eight checks to American Express, totaling $22,443.85.

- Brookins wrote 31 checks to his secretary, Anita Elliott, totaling $23,040.39. Brookins' accusers allege Elliott was required to cash the checks for Brookins' use.

- The first check written to Elliott on the First Commercial Bank account was dated March 21, 1986, the eve of Brookins' wedding to Bonita Coleman. The check was for $7,412.89 and bore the handwritten notation "wedding" in the memo space.

- A $2,000 check written by Brookins on the First Commercial account and dated Oct. 23, 1987, was endorsed to Brookins' eventual successor as 12th District bishop, Henry Belin. (Belin was named in a separate lawsuit, alleging misuse of funds collected on behalf of AME-operated Shorter College.)

Tape shows Barry smoking crack pipe

Knight News Service and Gazette Staff

WASHINGTON — After months of anticipation, federal prosecutors showed their grainy videotape of Mayor Marion Barry allegedly smoking crack cocaine in a downtown hotel room.

While being recorded by hidden cameras as part of a sting operation, Barry raised a pipe to his mouth, lit it and inhaled. Then he did it again.

Rasheeda Moore, his former girlfriend, can be seen on the tape watching Barry smoke the pipe.

As Barry put on his suit coat and prepared to leave, a troop of police rushed into the room through a side door yelling "Police!" and "FBI! FBI! You're under arrest."

"All right, no problem," Barry says, immediately indicating he understood the gravity of the moment.

Moore has testified that she and Barry used drugs about 100 times in 22 locations from 1986 to 1989, including in the Washington-area home of Arkansas's former African Methodist Episcopal leader, Bishop H.H. Brookins.

Brookins, who Moore said was in another part of the house at the time, said in a statement that he was "surprised and shocked" by Moore's testimony and that he had never met Moore.

The videotaped hotel incident is likely to be a crucial moment in the trial.

As the 80-minute videotape began rolling in the courtroom, it was released publicly and excerpts were shown on local television stations. Its quality is poor. The conversation is difficult to understand and the images are blurry and often obstructed.

While jurors watched intently, Barry studied the written transcript of the videotape.

Most of the tape is taken up by a long, chatty discussion between the mayor and Moore, who cooperated with the government by luring him to the hotel room the evening of Jan. 18. They discussed everything from her shoes and his weight to past sexual affairs and whether they should make love, which they didn't.

As part of the sting, Moore was flown from her home in California to Washington where she was lodged in Room 727 of the Vista Hotel. An undercover agent posed as a friend of Moore who was staying with her at the hotel and was able to get drugs.

Shortly after Barry arrived at the hotel, the undercover agent left, supposedly to buy drugs. In the interim, Barry and Moore drank cognac. Barry placed two telephone calls, and the two talked, twice hugging on the bed.

After nearly an hour, the undercover agent returned with crack cocaine. Barry gave Moore money to buy the drugs. Barry then indicated he preferred powder cocaine. Moore then sent the undercover agent out for cocaine, but, when Barry changed his mind, the crack was brought back.

Moore produced a crack pipe and a lighter. With the undercover agent out of the room, Barry and Moore began discussing who should smoke first. Moore said that smoking crack made her "hyper" and Barry said, "If you don't do it, I'm not going to do it."

Barry elicited a laugh from Moore when he asked her how to use the pipe. "That's what we used to do all the time," she said.

After more discussion about who would smoke first, Barry went over to the dresser, picked up the crack pipe, lit it and smoked it.

After he was arrested, Barry began cursing Moore repeatedly, even after she was taken from the room.

Barry has pleaded not guilty to all 14 counts against him. His attorney, R. Kenneth Mundy, has said he will try to show that Barry was illegally entrapped into smoking the crack.

Moore, a former model, testified Wednesday in Barry's drug and perjury trial that she and the mayor used drugs more than 100 times from 1986 until 1989. During most of that time they were romantically involved, said Moore.

On Tuesday Moore said she and Barry had smoked the drug at Brookins house in McLean, Va., although Brookins was elsewhere in the house at the time.

Brookins, in a statement Wednesday, said: "To the best of my knowledge, I have neither met Ms. Moore nor spoken with her."

Brookins, who has been a close adviser to Barry since Brookins was transferred to the Washington area from Arkansas in 1988, said, "I am surprised to hear that she says she has been to my home. Furthermore, if the alleged activity did occur, it would be a violation of the sanctity of my home, of my trust and of my friendship."

Moore gave a vivid description of the incident in a bathroom of Brookins' house.

It was an "extremely frightening experience," she said.

"I was anxious to smoke because I hadn't done any for a couple of days or so."

—Rasheeda Moore, testifying at Barry's trial

She said Barry smoked the drug first, put the pipe down and then she took it.

"I was anxious to smoke because I hadn't done any for a couple of days or so," she said. "So, I took the pipe next ... took a big hit, and when I took the hit, I got extremely high, started shaking. I started to lose it. I could feel my eyes starting to dilate and move back, and I could see him moving very slowly on the side."

She said she recovered in a few minutes and came out of the bathroom.

"And when I finally came through ... I walked out of the bathroom and found him," she said. "He was in the closet, putting the pipe in a shoe tree and putting the cocaine in another area ..."

"We both sat down, and I said I am not doing it anymore, this is it because I could have died at that time."

But, she said, it wasn't the last time she did it.

If her testimony is true, Moore's account is only the latest controversy to surround Brookins.

He was sued earlier this month by the Rev. G. Edward Smith of Fort Smith in Arkansas for allegedly diverting money from a special fund belonging to Shorter College in North Little Rock for his personal use.

The suit alleges he withdrew $137,850 for himself, paid $22,443 to American Express and wrote $23,000 in checks to his secretary over the course of two years ending in December of 1987. He was bishop of the AME district of Arkansas and Oklahoma for four years until coming to Washington in 1988.

In all, the suit asked that he account for $380,000 in the college's special funds.

Brookins has brushed off the allegations as "wild" and "irresponsible," and denied misusing the funds.

When he came to Washington, where he now oversees 361 churches in Washington, Virginia and Maryland, he became a close adviser to Barry.

—Jeffrey Stinson of the Gazette's Washington Bureau contributed to this report.

2 church officials added to lawsuit

Attorney amends his original complaint

By Gregg Jones
Gazette Staff

Attorneys for a member of the Shorter College board of trustees amended his lawsuit against the former head of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in Arkansas and Oklahoma to include two other church officials as defendants.

Named are the Rev. W. H. Hunter of Little Rock, vice chairman of the Shorter College board of trustees, and the Rev. J. J. Brown of Garland County, presiding elder of the Little Rock district of the AME church.

They are accused, along with Bishop H. H. Brookins, who now lives in McLean, Va., with diverting and misusing church and Shorter College funds. The college is in North Little Rock.

Hunter also is presiding elder of the Pine Bluff-South District of the AME church's 12th Episcopal District. The 12th District encompasses the two states. Brown formerly was secretary of the Shorter board.

The Rev. G. Edward West of Fort Smith filed the suit in Pulaski County Chancery Court. The amended complaint alleged that Brookins, Brown and Hunter misused funds diverted from a $562,000 loan obtained by Shorter College from Twin City Bank on Oct. 14, 1987. The suit asks that the defendants account for the loan proceeds and return "monies wrongfully diverted" to Shorter College.

AME clergy seek suit dismissal

Three African Methodist Episcopal clergymen who are being sued in connection with the misappropriation of more than $500,000 are seeking to have the complaint dismissed because the issues should be addressed first by the church.

AME Bishop H.H. Brookins and the Revs. J.J. Brown and W.H. Hunter contend in legal documents filed Friday in Pulaski County Chancery Court that the lawsuit should be thrown out because neither the AME Church nor Shorter College, whose money allegedly was misappropriated, are parties to the suit filed by the Rev. G. Edward West of Fort Smith, a Shorter College trustee.

Brookins, Brown and Hunter state that the matter involves "ecclesiastical questions and disputations over religious doctrine and practice, and a decision... would cause this court to make determinations of an ecclesiastical nature." The allegations should be first handled internally by the church's Judicial Council, they say.

"Civil courts have no authority over religious disputations even involving property rights ...

The motion asks for punitive damages and court and attorneys fees from West on the grounds that the accusations are slanderous to Brookins, Brown and Hunter.

The suit against Brookins, the former bishop of the AME Church district covering Arkansas and Oklahoma; Hunter of Little Rock; vice-chairman of the Shorter College board of trustees; and Brown of Garland County, presiding elder of the Little Rock district of the AME Church, contends they diverted money for their personal use from a $562,000 loan obtained by the college.

AME bishop sued over $183,000

Gazette Staff

Bishop H.H. Brookins of the African Methodist Episcopal Church should have to account for more than $183,000 he spent from a Shorter College account between 1986 and 1988, a member of the Shorter board contended Thursday in a federal lawsuit.

The Rev. G. Edward West of Fort Smith sued Brookins, now of McLean, Va., seeking an accounting for 63 checks he says Brookins wrote and a return of any money that was wrongfully diverted or property bought with such money.

The suit said Brookins wrote 24 checks totaling $137,850 to himself, cash or deposit from an account named H.H. Brookins-Shorter College between March 19, 1986, and May 5, 1988. It also asked for an accounting for eight checks totaling $22,443 Brookins wrote to American Express between July 9, 1987, and July 25, 1988, and 31 checks totaling $23,040 he wrote to his secretary, Anita Elliott, between March 21, 1986, and July 25, 1988.

West also has sued Brookins in state court, contending that the bishop, when he headed the AME district including Arkansas, diverted college money to himself.

On August 28, 1990, a review was conducted of Pulaski (INITIALS) Chancery Court file number 90-3455 with results set forth on insert form.

On October 2, 1990, pursuant to local newspaper articles, contact was reestablished with Attorney [REDACTED]
Fort Smith, Arkansas, at which time [REDACTED] advised the suit regarding captioned matter had been withdrawn from Pulaski County
Chancery Court and refiled in United States District Court
(USDC), Eastern District of Arkansas (EDA), Little Rock, Arkansas, under case number LRC 90-670. [REDACTED] advised the filing in Federal Court was basically identical to the previous filing except he had attached copies of pertinent checks and bank statements to that complaint.

b6

[REDACTED] advised his suit included a portion of a loan transaction from TWIN CITY BANK (TCB) on behalf of Shorter College, in October, 1987, in the amount of $562,000. At approximately the same time, BROOKINS made a $54,000 deposit into the account in question and immediately transferred $30,000 to an account established in Los Angeles, California, by BROOKINS. The only available funds to transfer were proceeds from the $54,000, and no legitimate reason exists for that transfer.

LR housing audit finds lax inventory plans

The major finding in a Little Rock audit of the city Housing Authority was that the agency failed to follow its own inventory control plans.

Joseph R. "Bob" Mason, the new Housing Authority director, released the audit Friday, saying that it was "not a scathing type report," nor did it "point fingers."

"It found administrative deficiencies," Mason said.

"A system's in place that can work," he said. "It had just gotten loose."

Mason, who comes to Little Rock from a similar job in Port Arthur, Texas, said the audit listed "mistakes made and poor judgment" of the past administration and would let him begin with a clean slate.

He inherited the job from Calvin Brown, who resigned in October after controversy created by a critical report by the federal Housing and Urban Development Department city management practices and low occupancy rates at three of the city's housing projects for families with children. The authority's five-member board requested the audit.

Most problems, Mason said, had been resolved by Lee Jones, the interim director, or would be cured once a permanent maintenance director is hired to oversee work in five family housing developments and three high-rise apartment buildings for the elderly and handicapped.

The audit, by city Finance Director John Pryor's staff, covered cash flow, purchasing and inventory procedures.

Auditors found that "the existing control structure ... satisfactory." But it added that in "some areas, prescribed procedures were not followed [or] questioned practices were not specifically covered by a guideline."

In one case, the audit revealed, "a 3-year contract extended for three years [at] $10,000 a year. Rationale ... was that the vendor originally was 20 percent below the next lowest bidder

[and] formal bidding would probably have increased the cost over the amount settled on for the extension."

"This form of negotiation," auditors said, "produces questionable results."

Friday's audit said a modernization program ran into problems when change orders were needed on renovation contracts and no money was available.

"Finite funding," it said, and "the unexpectedly large number of change orders ... produced a situation that caused the former director [Brown] to begin using questionable techniques ... supplementing the 'mod' project with labor and materials from general funds."

The audit also found inventory methods "in need of considerable improvement."

The authority board since Brown's departure has written off $5,000 in equipment, possibly stolen during break-ins.

The audit urged written procedures to govern cash receipts and recommended that a log be kept of employees who were given warehouse keys.

Mason said he welcomed the audit, which would free him to take on the vandalism and drug abuse problems at housing projects.

7 from AME Church, Shorter support Belin

Gazette Staff

A resolution signed by seven Little Rock area officials of the AME Church or Shorter College defending Arkansas-Oklahoma AME Bishop Henry Allen Belin Jr. will be presented tonight to the church's Bishop's Council in Washington, D.C.

Lawsuits by some AME Church members have accused Belin and his predecessor, Bishop H.H. Brookins, of siphoning nearly $1 million intended for Shorter and the church for their own use.

Belin was found in contempt of court by a Fort Smith judge, sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $1,000 for collecting church offerings after the judge forbade him to do so.

The resolution maintaining that Belin didn't break church rules was signed by Dr. Katherine Mitchell, Shorter College president; Rufus King Young Sr., treasurer of the Shorter Trustee Board; the Rev. Ulman Tyler, presiding elder of the Little Rock AME District; Clarence Vernon Boyd Sr., pastor of Bethel AME Church in North Little Rock; M. Smith, a Shorter trustee; the Rev. Wade Deaton Sr., pastor of Bailey Chapel AME Church; and the Rev Clarence Guy, pastor of Holly Grove AME Church in North Little Rock.

"Bishop Belin has not stolen one red copper cent of money raised for Shorter College or for any other cause in the 12th Episcopal District," states the resolution.

It also disputes the jurisdiction of civil courts in church matters and said the attacks on Belin and Brookins were "in concert with what we believe [to be] an underground movement with political overtones to discredit black leadership in our country."

Young said Tuesday that he would take the resolution to the conference in an effort to keep Belin as the district bishop.

"They want black leadership to their liking," Young said.

AME bishop gets $1,000 fine, 30 days

FORT SMITH - AME Bishop Henry Belin, who was ordered Tuesday to spend 30 days in jail for defying a court order when he accepted church offerings, has 40 days to appeal his case.

Belin, the Arkansas-Oklahoma District prelate for the African Methodist Episcopal Church, also was fined $1,000 by Chancellor Don Langston of Fort Smith for the contempt of court conviction, which resulted from his violation of a June 27 restraining order that prohibited him for seeking money not authorized by church laws.

the idea that they were," said Karr. "I'm not saying everybody in the church is above the law, but evidence here shows there are some who feel that way."

West and Hampton alleged Tuesday that Belin raised about $40,000 at four annual conferences after the June 27 restraining order was in place.

Karr said there is some question on whether the money was raised for legitimate church purposes. If monies were wrongfully diverted, the reverends are asking that Belin be held accountable.

Under AME laws, a national general budget fund is fixed Belin and his Little Rock attorney, Christopher Mercer, did not return phone calls Wednesday.

"Wrong is wrong whether it is committed in the street or in a church, whether you are wearing a color or a mask," said Charles Karr, attorney for the Rev. G. Edward West of Fort Smith. West could not be reached for comment.

West and the Rev. R.J. Hampton of Hot Springs in March sought a court order accounting for the amount of money Belin raised. The result was the June 27 restraining order.

"They (ministers) are not above the law if they ever had every four years at meetings of the general conference, said Karr. The budget is then allocated to the different geographical districts and each district is responsible for raising a portion of the general budget, he said.

The AME's highest judiciary body, the Judicial Council, held Dec. 13, 1989, that church laws prohibit its reverends from raising money not provided for in the general budget, said Karr. However, Belin refused to heed the declaratory decision and continued to hold fund-raising events such as a March banquet to benefit Shorter College in North Little Rock.

Church denies support for local bishop

By Valerie Smith
Gazette Staff

Local and national representatives of the African Methodist Episcopal Church said Saturday that a Little Rock pastor provided false information about the church's support for the embattled local bishop.

"He just lied," the Rev. R. J. Hampton of Little Rock said about statements made by Rev. Rickey Hicks, pastor of Connor Chapel AME Church in Little Rock.

The statements appeared in the Arkansas Gazette on Friday. They dealt with the Rev. Henry Allen Belin Jr., the bishop of the Arkansas-Oklahoma and Caribbean districts.

Hicks said that the Council of Bishops of the AME church unanimously approved a resolution supporting Belin, the beleaguered bishop who, along with his predecessor Bishop H. H. Brookins, has been accused of siphoning nearly $1 million intended for Shorter College for their own use.

Belin was found in contempt of court by a Fort Smith judge, sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $1,000 for collecting church offerings after the judge forbade him to do so.

Hicks told the Gazette that the resolution, signed by seven Little Rock area officials of the AME Church, was presented to the Council of Bishops Wednesday night and that the council "voted to stand behind Bishop Belin in this ordeal."

But a senior bishop from New York and the council's acting secretary from Tennessee both said Hicks'

SERIALIZED	FILED

statements were "absolutely not true."

"To my knowledge, there was no resolution presented to the council. No action was taken with regard to Bishop Belin pro or con," said Senior Bishop D. Ward Nichols, of Huntington, N.Y.

Nichols, a retired bishop on the council, said he participated in both days of the meeting in Washington. He said the meeting was closed to the public, and that Hicks and Hampton did not attend.

"I was in the council when they opened up and I was there when they closed," Nichols said in a telephone interview Saturday. "I'm not saying the Belin matter wasn't discussed. I'm saying no action was taken."

Hicks could not be reached for comment Saturday. When a reporter called his residence, a woman who said she was his wife was combative. The woman took a telephone number, but Hicks never returned the call.

Nichols said the council discussed Belin, and that a three-member committee was appointed to study the situation in Arkansas. He referred to Belin as "a friend of mine and I like him very much." He said he believed the false information was the result of an honest mistake.

"I think [Hicks] just might have misinterpreted it — that something happened on the outside [of the meeting] and they wished it would have happened on the inside," Nichols said.

The Right Rev. Vernon Byrd, acting secretary of the Council of Bishops, confirmed Nichols' assessment of the meeting. Byrd, of Nashville, Tenn., said no vote was taken and no resolution was presented to the council Wednesday or Thursday.

He said Belin's case was discussed at an afternoon session, but no official vote was taken.

Hampton said he feared there was an attempt to mislead the public.

"Nobody is proud of what is happening in our church," said Hampton, who is one of the plaintiffs in a series of lawsuits against Belin. "But to falsify information ... then that is very wrong."

Bishop accused in theft challenges jail term possibility

By Lisa Pevtzow
Gazette Staff

AME Bishop Henry Belin, who stands accused of stealing church money, is challenging the right of a judge to send him to jail for collecting a church offering of $6,000.

"There's a string of decisions from here to the Saudi Arabia desert saying that civil court can't regulate church decisions," said Belin's attorney, Christopher Mercer. "We are thoroughly disillusioned by the court's decision. We think it's patently wrong on its face."

Belin denied any wrong-doing in a telephone conversation with Mercer after hearing of Tuesday's ruling and said he was disturbed about going to jail, his attorney said.

"Placing a high clergyman in jail for anything does not do any good for his reputation," Mercer said. "I hope this is not the end of the world. I'm trying to get over the shock of the court doing what it did."

Belin did not appear in court Tuesday and has not been available for comment since. Mercer said he did not know Belin's whereabouts.

Belin was found in contempt of court and sentenced to the 30-day jail term and a $1,000 fine by Chancery Judge Don Langston of Fort Smith, who determined that Belin asked for and received money in violation of church law, thereby violating a temporary restraining order.

Witnesses told Langston that Belin collected offerings totaling more than $6,000 at an annual church conference in North Little Rock.

Mercer and Langston disagree over whether that violates Langston's original order.

"I said, 'Don't collect, receive or disburse any money during the period of the injunction,'" said Langston on Thursday. "He has to collect it in accordance with church law, account for it and send it to the right entities."

Langston issued the order in June on the heels of a series of state and federal lawsuits by two Shorter College trustees that contended that Belin and his predecessor, Bishop H. H. Brookins, diverted close to $1 million of church money for their personal use.

If Belin files a petition within 30 days of the contempt order, Langston will hold a hearing to let Belin to prove that he didn't take the money, the judge said.

Belin must show the judge documentation giving details of who collected the money, how much was collected and where it was distributed, Langston said.

"He can't come up here and say 'I didn't collect it,'" Langston said. "I won't buy that."

Mercer objected to Langston's explanation of his ruling, saying that the judge merely prevented Belin from breaking church law and didn't attach specific conditions.

"All [Belin] was doing was conducting regular church business," Mercer said. "And they interpret this to the court that accepting offerings is in violation of church law."

The church's finance committee allocated the offerings to offset expenses of the meeting, said Mercer, who expressed doubt that his client ever personally handled the money.

Case of embezzlement against bishop dropped

By Toya Hill
Gazette Staff

The case against African Methodist Episcopal Bishop H. H. Brookins alleging he diverted funds from Shorter College has been dismissed.

The suit, one of several that have been filed throughout the state involving the church, was the only one that named Brookins, both Brookins and his attorney, Allan Dishongh, said Saturday.

It was dismissed without prejudice Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Little Rock by Judge Henry Woods, saying the Rev. G. Edward West of Fort Smith has no standing to bring the suit on behalf of Shorter College.

"I'm going to pray for Rev. West and his family because he has made so many mistakes," Brookins said Saturday from his home in Virginia. "The thing was all personal. The brother got confused.

"He took out a vendetta," Brookins said.

West said Saturday evening he was disappointed, but the suit would be refilled.

"The judge's dismissal is not a dismissal out of hand. He simply said Shorter College needs to be a party to the suit," West said.

"That's easy for us to do," he said, adding that the amended suit is already being prepared.

West's attorney, Charles Karr of Fort Smith, said the allegations were clearly no vendetta.

"I would suggest that anyone who is interested in that sort of thing would look at the facts alleged in the lawsuit," Karr said. "I think it's quite obvious from looking at the complaint ... that this is not a personal vendetta."

Among other things, the original suit, which was filed last summer, contended Brookins diverted about $380,000 from Shorter College into a secret bank account. It said Brookins, who was chairman of the college board at the time, wrote checks on the account at

"I'm going to pray for Rev. West and his family because he has made so many mistakes. The thing was all personal. The brother got confused."

—H.H. Brookins,
African Methodist Episcopal bishop

First Commercial Bank in Little Rock totaling $261,269 from 1986 to 1988.

Brookins was also presiding bishop of the 12th Episcopal District, composed of Arkansas and Oklahoma, from 1984 to 1988. He is now bishop of the church's 2nd Episcopal District in Washington, D.C.

Other suits by West and Shorter board member Rev. R.J. Hampton of Little Rock, presiding elder in the Hot Springs AME church, have been filed against present 12th Episcopal District Bishop H.A. Belin Jr.

"I think that the complaint speaks for itself about the facts that were raised by Rev. West," Karr said. And, "It was dismissed without prejudice," which means it's not a final judgment of that issue, he said.

"That [the dismissal] does not necessarily mean a final decision on all issues in that lawsuit," Karr said. "It simply dismissed it for a lack of standing. It did not decide anything."

Karr said he and West are also looking at other legal options.

But Brookins said nothing done by West will disrupt his life.

"People have known my ministry and my work 35 years," he said. "I've built some of the major churches of this nation. Truth needs no explanation."

Vote urges Shorter oust 2 as trustees Pair's suits charged money misdirected

BY JAKE SANDLIN
Democrat-Gazette Staff Writer

The executive committee of Shorter College's board of trustees recommended Saturday expelling the two trustees who filed lawsuits alleging misappropriation of money raised for the college.

Recommended for expulsion are the Revs. R.J. Hampton and G. Edward West, both of Hot Springs.

The resolution was unanimously adopted by nine members of the 11-member executive committee in a Saturday afternoon meeting at Shorter. The two-year college in North Little Rock is operated by the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The recommendations will be forwarded to the next meeting of the full board in January, Shorter College President Katherine Mitchell said.

Board Treasurer Rufus K. Young read the committee's resolution at a news conference at the college after the meeting. The statement cited the "adverse and false publicity" resulting from the suits, which damaged Shorter's fund-raising.

Hampton and West, formerly of Fort Smith, sought a federal court order in Fort Smith in March 1990 to account for money raised by Bishop Henry Allen Belin Jr. of the AME Church for legitimate church purposes. In June 1990, the two men also filed a federal lawsuit alleging that Belin and his predecessor, Bishop H.H. Brookins, diverted about $380,000 from church and Shorter College accounts for personal use.

The case against Brookins was dismissed in February by Judge Henry Woods, saying there was no standing to bring the suit on behalf of Shorter College.

Hampton, a presiding elder in the Hot Springs AME Church, also had filed suit in Garland County Chancery Court in Hot Springs alleging that Belin tried to remove him from the church.

Belin was held in contempt of court by Chancellor Don Langston of Fort Smith on Dec. 11, 1990, after Belin accepted a $6,000 offering in violation of a court order restraining him from further fund-raising campaigns until the federal lawsuit was resolved.

Belin was ordered to spend 30 days in jail and fined $1,000. Belin was to turn himself in to Sebastian County Detention Center, but didn't.

"We know that this $6,000 was not for Shorter College, that it was for Episcopal District Administration and was used for that purpose," Young said, reading from the resolution.

Young said Belin had raised and turned over to Shorter College $131,724.88 in the 1988-89 school year, $149,119.82 in 1989-90 and $102,668.83 in 1990-91. The 1991-92 fund-raising figures were unavailable.

"These facts indicate that the false allegations that have been made against (Belin) with reference to his diverting funds intended for Shorter College to his personal use have adversely (affected) the raising of funds for Shorter College to the tune of some $47,000 per year," Young said, again reading from the resolution.

In answering reporters' questions, Young said that there were never any missing funds raised for Shorter College by Belin.

"There's never been a question (of missing funds) with any member here," Young said.

Go to jail or face fine, A.M.E. bishop warned

BY JULIEANNE MILLER

Democrat-Gazette Fort Smith Bureau

FORT SMITH - A.M.E. Bishop Henry Allen Belin Jr. has been given until Dec. 31 to start serving a jail sentence.

Belin was found in contempt of court a year ago for accepting church donations in violation of a court order, but he didn't show up as ordered to serve a 30-day sentence.

An order filed Monday in Sebastian County Circuit Court by Chancellor John Van Winkle says Belin will be fined $100 a day if he fails to show at the Sebastian County Detention Center before 10 a.m. Dec. 31.

Belin, a bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, failed in early December to begin serving the 30-day jail term.

Chancellor Don Langston of Fort Smith held him in contempt of court Dec. 11, 1990, in a lawsuit brought by the Rev. R.J. Hampton of Hot Springs and the Rev. G. Edward West of Fort Smith. Belin had accepted a $6,000 offering in violation of a court order restraining him from further fund-raising until a federal lawsuit against him was settled.

That lawsuit, dismissed in February by U.S. District Judge Henry Woods, alleged that Belin and his predecessor, Bishop H.H. Brookins, diverted about $380,000 from church and Shorter College business accounts for personal use.

Shorter College is a two-year college in North Little Rock. It is affiliated with the A.M.E. Church.

West said Monday that actions taken Saturday by the college's board of trustees were a "smear campaign" by some "envious" members of the board's executive committee.

The committee recommended Saturday that West and Hampton be removed from the board of trustees. That recommendation is to be forwarded to the full board in January.

West contends he is not a trustee of Shorter College, as determined in another lawsuit brought a year ago before Chancellor John Robbins of Hot Springs.
